The Steinway Society's Young Artist Program will assist young pianists in further developing their musical careers and artistic dreams. The benefits of the Young Artist Program will include:

Artist Development: We will assist our young artist members to develop their artist profiles, by providing clinics on how to develop an artist's portfolio, by providing professional portraits, providing clinics on stage etiquette and how to communicate with the media, and how to promote themselves.

Charity & Volunteer Activities: The Program will encourage and assist young artist members to give back to the community, performing concerts to raise funds for charitable organizations. The young artists who contribute will receive official acknowledgement, which in turn will enrich their resume.

Music Education & Concerts: The Program will present a variety of piano concerts, master classes, workshops, clinics, and even movies, which are all geared to engage and inspire the young artist members. It will be an excellent platform for young artists to perform on stage, learn from masters, communicate with other young artists, and further develop their talents.
